Universalism: the belief that all people will be saved or that all ways lead to God and eternal life. Many who subscribe to this theology claim that, for instance, Christians and Muslim worship the same God. The Prosperity Gospel: the belief that God's primary concern is for believers to be healthy and wealthy. If Christians are sick, suffering, or poor, it is because of sin or a lack of faith.

7 It is quite revealing that none of the recent theological studies take Metz's constitutive debate with the political theology of Carl Schmitt more seriously than footnote acknowledgements. See for instance, Ashley, 223 and Martinez, 272. Without developing the point, Tück (89-91, 154) briefly acknowledges that Schmitt was a controversial but important interlocutor constitutive for the ...

In every era, Christians are called "to contend earnestly for the faith once and for all delivered to the saints." [1] Some struggles recur in every generation. Battles such as the veracity of Scripture or the person and work of Christ are perennial ones. The church, again and again, has to articulate and defend these doctrines. In the spirit of Luther, the church—and especially those who ...

Liberalism is both a tradition---coming out of the late-18th century Protestant attempt to reconfigure traditional Christian teaching in the light of modern knowledge and values---and a diverse, but recognizable approach to theology.

Seven Characteristics of Liberal Theology

The whole of our life has the glorious prospect of living out the great doctrines of the faith. The doctrine of the Trinity, for example, directs God-imaging creatures to live relationally. Those who proclaim that God is love are invited to be included in the love-life of God and so become lovers themselves (Qn. 17:21).
