Continental feminists argue that much of the lethal racism and sexism of Western thought—the thought underlying our basic social structures and ideals—is affective, unconscious, imaginary, visual, and kinesthetic (for example, Alcoff 2006, Brennan 2003, Lee 2010, Sullivan 2006).

Continental Feminism (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy)

FEMINISM AND CONTINENTAL PHILOSOPHY Continental philosophy has been a significant force in the development of contemporary feminist thought. Many feminists have turned to the work of continental philosophers because the topics explored by these philosophers are germane to the kinds of questions feminists pursue. Since Hegel continental philosophy has been concerned with questions of ethics ...
