Edvard Grieg - "To the spring" - from "Lyric Pieces" - YouTube

To Spring is both pastoral and Impressionistic, and also one of the composer's more popular Lyric Pieces. But it may be its wistful character and hints of the intimate kind of lyricism found in Liszt , and even in Rachmaninov (who was not yet actively composing), that have made this work popular.

Edvard Grieg - Wikipedia

Grieg was enamored of the poetry of Aasmund Olavsson Vinje (1818-1870) and began to study a volume of his works in 1877. The composer was always moved by the subjects of love, nature, and loss. Vinje's transcendent ability to express powerful emotions in these realms greatly inspired him. This song's text conveys the feelings of a dying man who sadly ponders that this spring will be his last.
